Laminate flooring composition

Laminate flooring consists of several layers:

- Top layer (Overlay): A transparent layer of resin or hard plastic that protects the floor from scratches, stains and everyday wear. It is often water-resistant, which makes cleaning easier
- Decorative layer: A high-resolution printed image that imitates wood, stone or other natural materials. This layer gives the floor its realistic appearance
- Support panel (HDF): A high-density fibreboard (HDF) panel that gives the floor its stability and structural strength. It is also moisture-resistant
- Counterbalance: A bottom layer that balances the panel and improves its stability. It can also provide sound insulation
